Professional Background

Mr. Miller began practicing law in Chicago in 1960, as member of house counsel for the First National Bank of Chicago. From 1961-1999, Mr. Miller held various positions at the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC). He began his career with the OCC in 1961, when he served as Attorney-Advisor to Comptroller Saxon on a wide range of issues, including drafting and following through to enactment of trust power transfer legislation, shifting this authority from the Federal Reserve to the OCC.

From 1962-1978, Mr. Miller held the position of Deputy Comptroller for Trusts, where he was responsible for the Trust Examinations Division. From 1982-1986, he served as the Deputy Comptroller for Trusts and Securities. Mr. Miller was the Deputy Comptroller for Compliance from 1986-1990, where he was responsible for Trust, Investment Securities and Consumer Activities Division. In addition, he was in charge of the creation and implementation of the OCC's Compliance Program.

In 1990, Mr. Miller was promoted to the position of Senior Advisor for Fiduciary Responsibilities. In this position, he advised and assisted in the development and implementation of supervisory policies relating to the fiduciary activities of national banks.
